While reporting on issues pertaining to women, it is not considered as if what kinds of influences a particular report would have on the domestic, social or professional life of the women and children. They also forget that these terrorists are giving bad implications. And yet, media organizations do not hold the responsibility accountable in any way.

3. It is alleged by informed circles that some of the investigative journalists by some individuals or institutions to achieve their vested interests. The journalists, especially some of the Kirghizstan. The journalists who persisted in the death of the deceased TV reporters, would persistently visit the home of the deceased to Pakistan. During this time, journalists, especially some of the journalists, would have on the domestic, social or professional life of the woman.

4. It is of ten complained that news items are published or telecast without due consideration of the implications. And yet, media organizations do not hold the responsibility accountable in any way.

5. Sometimes, ready-made reports are provided to selected journalists by some individuals or institutions to achieve their vested interests. The journalists, especially some of the journalists, would have on the domestic, social or professional life of the woman.

6. It is of ten complained that news items are published or telecast without due consideration of the implications. And yet, media organizations do not hold the responsibility accountable in any way.

7. Pakistan Electronic Media Regulatory Authority (PEMRA) lacks credibility and has failed to deliver on its role of protecting the rights of listeners and viewers. Its role can be made effective and credible by including in its Board reputed personalities from amongst the senior journalists and civil society organizations. PEMRA must play an effective role and ensure strict implementation of internationally recognized media standards.

8. PEMRA must be reconstituted in such a manner to minimize the influence of government and other official institutions on its decision making. This is necessary to ensure that no unfair restrictions be imposed on free speech and people’s right to information.

9. PEMLA law should be extended to cover the government run TV channels and radio stations. The government should be held accountable for any violation of the law.

10. The entire decision making process in the government regarding media and journalists must be completely transparent.

The secrets funds of all types, which are currently managed by the government, are not necessary. The government has no right whatsoever to use taxpayers money to benefit any organization. The government must disclose the terms and conditions of the grants that are provided to the government if the government wishes to continue providing these funds. The media must abide by these transparency standards, which should be legally enforceable.

PEMRA must be reconstituted to give adequate representation to journalists and other stakeholders. In order to make it an independent and a credible media regulator.

Scope of PEMRA law must be expanded to cover the state controlled electronic media as well.

Government must stop collecting these media funds, which are used to bribe journalists and media organizations. All government and private media agencies must operate transparently and open to public scrutiny.

There should be no government interference in media affairs and all the complaints of the media persons is against whom should be consistent with international best practices. However, it is imperative that newspapers on their behalf for making it an independent and a credible media regulator.

Media organizations must establish a comprehensive code of conduct, besides providing a credible system to handle complaints of violation of law, the government must facilitate the media but in a transparent and equitable manner.

Media organizations must establish effective partnerships with media related departments of universities and arrange for appropriate trainings of young and mid-career journalists.

The Centre for Peace and Development Initiatives (CPDI) believes that media organizations and associations have the capacity, standards and values by the media organizations.

Furthermore, there should be no government interference in media affairs and all the complaints of the media persons is against whom should be consistent with international best practices. However, it is imperative that newspapers on their behalf for making it an independent and a credible media regulator.

The Centre for Peace and Development Initiatives (CPDI) believes that media organizations and associations have the capacity, standards and values by the media organizations.

Furthermore, there should be no government interference in media affairs and all the complaints of the media persons is against whom should be consistent with international best practices. However, it is imperative that newspapers on their behalf for making it an independent and a credible media regulator.

The Centre for Peace and Development Initiatives (CPDI) believes that media organizations and associations have the capacity, standards and values by the media organizations.

Furthermore, there should be no government interference in media affairs and all the complaints of the media persons is against whom should be consistent with international best practices. However, it is imperative that newspapers on their behalf for making it an independent and a credible media regulator.
Some of the complaints relating to media organizations, which include newspapers, magazines, radio stations and TV channels, are:

1. Media organizations and journalists are reluctant to give space to citizens’ complaints. As a result, at times, such reports are not published by government departments, important private organizations or even the media organizations.

2. Very few investigative reports are published or telecast. In this context, some of issues need to be mentioned, which are as follows:

   a. People should also have access to information about the media organizations. At times, some journalists and anchorpersons are paid to reveal certain secrets or confidential information about media organizations. People are often blamed for indulging in corruption, sensational reporting or the dissemination of false information. Such reports should be made binding on these anchorpersons to declare their income or benefits to the public.

   b. The Nepali Times, a daily newspaper in Nepal, reported in January 2010 that some of the Nepali journalists at all cost and show reluctance to admit the claims made are clearly doubtful and of dubious in nature. Furthermore, people should also have access to information about the media organizations. At times, some journalists and anchorpersons are paid to reveal certain secrets or confidential information about media organizations. People are often blamed for indulging in corruption, sensational reporting or the dissemination of false information. Such reports should be made binding on these anchorpersons to declare their income or benefits to the public.

   c. People should also have access to information about the media organizations. At times, some journalists and anchorpersons are paid to reveal certain secrets or confidential information about media organizations. People are often blamed for indulging in corruption, sensational reporting or the dissemination of false information. Such reports should be made binding on these anchorpersons to declare their income or benefits to the public. People also have the right to know about their salaries, perks and privileges; as well as about what changes have been witnessed in the income and assets of these anchor persons and their families.

   d. Furthermore, people should also have access to information about the media organizations. At times, some journalists and anchorpersons are paid to reveal certain secrets or confidential information about media organizations. People are often blamed for indulging in corruption, sensational reporting or the dissemination of false information. Such reports should be made binding on these anchorpersons to declare their income or benefits to the public.

   e. People should also have access to information about the media organizations. At times, some journalists and anchorpersons are paid to reveal certain secrets or confidential information about media organizations. People are often blamed for indulging in corruption, sensational reporting or the dissemination of false information. Such reports should be made binding on these anchorpersons to declare their income or benefits to the public.

   f. People should also have access to information about the media organizations. At times, some journalists and anchorpersons are paid to reveal certain secrets or confidential information about media organizations. People are often blamed for indulging in corruption, sensational reporting or the dissemination of false information. Such reports should be made binding on these anchorpersons to declare their income or benefits to the public.

   g. People should also have access to information about the media organizations. At times, some journalists and anchorpersons are paid to reveal certain secrets or confidential information about media organizations. People are often blamed for indulging in corruption, sensational reporting or the dissemination of false information. Such reports should be made binding on these anchorpersons to declare their income or benefits to the public.

   h. People should also have access to information about the media organizations. At times, some journalists and anchorpersons are paid to reveal certain secrets or confidential information about media organizations. People are often blamed for indulging in corruption, sensational reporting or the dissemination of false information. Such reports should be made binding on these anchorpersons to declare their income or benefits to the public.

   i. People should also have access to information about the media organizations. At times, some journalists and anchorpersons are paid to reveal certain secrets or confidential information about media organizations. People are often blamed for indulging in corruption, sensational reporting or the dissemination of false information. Such reports should be made binding on these anchorpersons to declare their income or benefits to the public.

   j. People should also have access to information about the media organizations. At times, some journalists and anchorpersons are paid to reveal certain secrets or confidential information about media organizations. People are often blamed for indulging in corruption, sensational reporting or the dissemination of false information. Such reports should be made binding on these anchorpersons to declare their income or benefits to the public.

   k. People should also have access to information about the media organizations. At times, some journalists and anchorpersons are paid to reveal certain secrets or confidential information about media organizations. People are often blamed for indulging in corruption, sensational reporting or the dissemination of false information. Such reports should be made binding on these anchorpersons to declare their income or benefits to the public.

   l. People should also have access to information about the media organizations. At times, some journalists and anchorpersons are paid to reveal certain secrets or confidential information about media organizations. People are often blamed for indulging in corruption, sensational reporting or the dissemination of false information. Such reports should be made binding on these anchorpersons to declare their income or benefits to the public.

   m. People should also have access to information about the media organizations. At times, some journalists and anchorpersons are paid to reveal certain secrets or confidential information about media organizations. People are often blamed for indulging in corruption, sensational reporting or the dissemination of false information. Such reports should be made binding on these anchorpersons to declare their income or benefits to the public.

   n. People should also have access to information about the media organizations. At times, some journalists and anchorpersons are paid to reveal certain secrets or confidential information about media organizations. People are often blamed for indulging in corruption, sensational reporting or the dissemination of false information. Such reports should be made binding on these anchorpersons to declare their income or benefits to the public.

   o. People should also have access to information about the media organizations. At times, some journalists and anchorpersons are paid to reveal certain secrets or confidential information about media organizations. People are often blamed for indulging in corruption, sensational reporting or the dissemination of false information. Such reports should be made binding on these anchorpersons to declare their income or benefits to the public.

   p. People should also have access to information about the media organizations. At times, some journalists and anchorpersons are paid to reveal certain secrets or confidential information about media organizations. People are often blamed for indulging in corruption, sensational reporting or the dissemination of false information. Such reports should be made binding on these anchorpersons to declare their income or benefits to the public.

   q. People should also have access to information about the media organizations. At times, some journalists and anchorpersons are paid to reveal certain secrets or confidential information about media organizations. People are often blamed for indulging in corruption, sensational reporting or the dissemination of false information. Such reports should be made binding on these anchorpersons to declare their income or benefits to the public.

   r. People should also have access to information about the media organizations. At times, some journalists and anchorpersons are paid to reveal certain secrets or confidential information about media organizations. People are often blamed for indulging in corruption, sensational reporting or the dissemination of false information. Such reports should be made binding on these anchorpersons to declare their income or benefits to the public.

   s. People should also have access to information about the media organizations. At times, some journalists and anchorpersons are paid to reveal certain secrets or confidential information about media organizations. People are often blamed for indulging in corruption, sensational reporting or the dissemination of false information. Such reports should be made binding on these anchorpersons to declare their income or benefits to the public.

   t. People should also have access to information about the media organizations. At times, some journalists and anchorpersons are paid to reveal certain secrets or confidential information about media organizations. People are often blamed for indulging in corruption, sensational reporting or the dissemination of false information. Such reports should be made binding on these anchorpersons to declare their income or benefits to the public.

   u. People should also have access to information about the media organizations. At times, some journalists and anchorpersons are paid to reveal certain secrets or confidential information about media organizations. People are often blamed for indulging in corruption, sensational reporting or the dissemination of false information. Such reports should be made binding on these anchorpersons to declare their income or benefits to the public.

   v. People should also have access to information about the media organizations. At times, some journalists and anchorpersons are paid to reveal certain secrets or confidential information about media organizations. People are often blamed for indulging in corruption, sensational reporting or the dissemination of false information. Such reports should be made binding on these anchorpersons to declare their income or benefits to the public.

   w. People should also have access to information about the media organizations. At times, some journalists and anchorpersons are paid to reveal certain secrets or confidential information about media organizations. People are often blamed for indulging in corruption, sensational reporting or the dissemination of false information. Such reports should be made binding on these anchorpersons to declare their income or benefits to the public.

   x. People should also have access to information about the media organizations. At times, some journalists and anchorpersons are paid to reveal certain secrets or confidential information about media organizations. People are often blamed for indulging in corruption, sensational reporting or the dissemination of false information. Such reports should be made binding on these anchorpersons to declare their income or benefits to the public.

   y. People should also have access to information about the media organizations. At times, some journalists and anchorpersons are paid to reveal certain secrets or confidential information about media organizations. People are often blamed for indulging in corruption, sensational reporting or the dissemination of false information. Such reports should be made binding on these anchorpersons to declare their income or benefits to the public.

   z. People should also have access to information about the media organizations. At times, some journalists and anchorpersons are paid to reveal certain secrets or confidential information about media organizations. People are often blamed for indulging in corruption, sensational reporting or the dissemination of false information. Such reports should be made binding on these anchorpersons to declare their income or benefits to the public.